A little History behind The Red Cow

The Red Cow dates from Plantagenet times and the barn that now adjoins the kitchen, and which today provides wonderful beamed accommodation, is thought to be the oldest building still standing in Chrishall.

The Red Cow has evolved from being one of at least three, simple watering holes for thirsty villagers, to having fantastic dining and luxury accommodation. It has hosted celebrations and events for villagers and others throughout the decades and continues to do so today.

The Red Cow pub is now run by a Top 50 gastro food and award-winning chef, who brings a wealth of culinary expertise to the kitchen, having spent five years as Head Chef at the award winning pub The Hole In The Wall in Little Wilbraham, Cambridge before moving on to become Head Chef at The Elm Tree Inn, Elm, Cambridgeshire.

Tryfun's reputation for creating immaculately presented and flavourful dishes helped both pubs to gain the most popular gastropubs in and around Cambridge.
